In this workshop, we will discuss a number of specific aspects of research publishing, and how these aspects are reflected in the work of international fora in publication ethics – such as COPE – Committee of Publication Ethics.

Starting from specific case studies related to the issue of originality of scientific contributions, we will address the following topics: Who is an author and how authorship, (co)authorship or multiple authorship are defined in different research areas; what are the ethical requirements of writing a scientific paper; what duplicate content means; what are (or can be) the ethical standards that help increase the quality of scientific works; what plagiarism means.

We will address these topics and more during the workshop, with the aim of increasing awareness of this controversial area of research. Participants at any stage of their research careers, who wish to discuss ethical issues around scientific publication, are welcome!

Students' Workshop | Postmodern Challenges in Conjuality | 16:30 – 18:30 | 27.04.2018

Room | Aula Building E

Chair(s) | Iulian APOSTU

Language of Presentation | Romanian

Overview |

A new orientation in conjuality tends to become more and more visible. The tendencies of conjugal individualism underlined by valuing the self, gradually enter into a competition with the classical values of conjugal solidarity. Solidarity becomes a duty of the other and the conjugal fusion is directly influenced by the way in which the individual manages to incorporate the other into himself.

The analysis of the existing social researches in the field of conjugal couple shows that the contemporary social mentality still values solidarity as being an important value for the conjugal functionality. However, the increasingly frequent social tendencies show that solidarity alters more and more into becoming a type of solidarity "of the other towards myself". It gets consistency up to the extent in which it is attributed to the other, not to one's self. Therefore, from an individualist perspective, solidarity appears eminent understood as being the other's moral responsibility. This new orientation tends to reconceptualize solidarity which is being pertained the very fusional aspects in favour of those related to the personal ideal. The reason to stay together no longer involves solidarity of purposes or mutual ideals, the partner becomes means of resource for fulfilling the personal ideals and the coherence of the new solidary orientations derives from the extent to which the other also fulfills his individual ideals through his partner. Thus, solidarity is no longer substantiated by commonly developed and fulfilled values, but it emerges as a consequence of individual fulfillment through the other. This workshop aims to present a possible theoretical explanation of social mentalities that could explain functionality through a structural reconfiguration of solidarity.

Room | Aula Building E

Moderators | Daniela SIMIONOVICI

Language of Presentation | Romanian / English

Overview |

The rethinking of social action must take into account the structural changes of the current globalizing society. Structuring a transport network that will allow a rapid movement of passengers and goods, the development of transport infrastructure, especially of high-speed roads, is an obligation for the sustainable development of Romania. The year of the centenary should also bring about a rethinking of the national unit from the perspective of the accessibility of transport between the different regions of the country, and the interconnection of highways. The development of an infrastructure in the eastern part of the country, connecting Romania to the Republic of Moldova and Ukraine, but also the northeastern part of the country to the west and south, is a vital necessity for the survival of a modern Romania, which is an important pillar of growth in the region.

Call for Book Chapters: Ethics in Research Practice and Innovation in a Book to be published in the USA, by IGI Global Publishing House.

Submission Date: May 30, 2018

Editors

Antonio Sandu, Ana Frunza, Elena Unguru

Objective

The work will bring together the main themes of ethics in research and innovation, which will allow readers - researchers, but especially researchers in training, to acquire the standards of their own type of practice and thus avoid any voluntarily, but especially involuntarily unethical behavior, which may arise from ignorance of the ethical meaning of the type of research the researcher is involved in.

Target Audience

The volume will be used as a research ethics manual in doctoral schools, research masters in fields such as biomedicine, technology, and social sciences. We hope that the volume will contribute to the unification of ethical practices in the field of science and technology through the mutual transfer of know-how between relatively separate research areas through the unitary understanding of the ethical significance of research and good practice, especially in terms of publication, avoiding misconduct and assessing the possible impact that research can have on the results. The handbook can help ethicists, members of the ethics committees, counselors of ethics and ethics consultants as well as PhD adviser - generally the principal investigators and, ultimately, any researcher interested in ethical reflection on their own practice.

All proposals should be submitted through the eEditorial Discovery® online submission manager.
